

---

Subject: Re: Tutorial macro

Posted by StefanoSpataro on Mon, 05 Aug 2013 13:11:59 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Hi,

the "exit(0)" problem is known since ages, it happens sometimes and not always, and it is hidden in some wrong destructor somewhere in the code. Adding "delete fRun;" before the exit should help.

In reality it is not a big problem, then we have never tried to find who is the guilty guy. The exit(0) lise is not important since we always run root -q, most probably it could be removed.

---