Hi Michael,

yes, as far as I know and that's how we use it. You install your own self-hosted server (see <https://rocket.chat/docs/installation/manual-installation/>) and then access the chat groups from the client side by https (everything works inside a browser, and that's different from SLACK).

Well, it seems that you can even start ad-hoc without your own server (see <https://rocket.chat/docs/installation/rocket-chat-cloud/>) and access their server (sort of "skype-like"), but I guess that would only work until a certain limit of messages per day (because of disk space, as messages can also contain plots etc.)

sincerely, Soeren
