Dear Sebastian and others,

I see Sebastian's point and would certainly support it. The main challenge of such a meeting is to keep movitating people to join such a tutorial on a very regular basis. As Sebastian mentions, it should not only be for the experts, but also have the non-experts to participate actively and regularly (!) in such a meeting. The danger is, however, that at the end of the semester only the speaker and less-than-a-handfull of mainly expert participants will be present in the vrvs lecture. But maybe if we indeed fix the dates, topics, and speakers before hand it would help. I would be curious about the opinions of others on this matter as well.

What we could do is to give it a try. Sebastian, are you willing (and have time) to organize such an event? If not, let me know....

Kind wishes and have a nice weekend as well,

Johan.
