Added:

The Makefiles of EvtGen were rewritten in the proper way, in svn, without the local lines.

But once you call the configure, they are updated with your local stuff. Of course one should commit code in svn without these additions.

A lot of time ago we have agreed to have not EvtGen in the common compiling process, because it is difficult to maintain for the CERMLIB and other things. Of course we can change this policy, to have it in the Dashboard somehow.
