The Makefiles of EvtGen were rewritten in the proper way, in svn, without the local lines.

But once you call the configure, they are updated with your local stuff. Of course one should commit code in svn without these addictions.

A lot of time ago we have agreed to have not EvtGen in the common compiling process, because it is difficult to mantain for the CERNLIB and other things. Of course we can change this policy, to have it in the Dashboard somehow.
