Thanks for the help. Even though this was not the problem. The problem was found to be that the package "patch" was not installed on the system and the thus the file with the bug was not patched.
The solution was then to install the patch package using the package system.
Later on in the install more packages was found missing, and all of them were possible to find and install using the package manager in Ubuntu. When this is done the config.sh script runs without errors.
